State Library contributes Colville Examiner to Chronicling America

Site is home to 1.7 million historic newspaper pages

OLYMPIA...The Colville Examiner is among eight newspapers and more than 42,000 historic newspaper pages recently contributed to Chronicling America by the Washington State Library. Chronicling America is a project of the National Digital Newspaper Program (NDNP), a partnership between the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Library of Congress.

The Colville Examiner was created in 1907 by a group of Democratic Party members who hired J. C. Harrigan, a twenty-nine year old newspaperman, to serve as editor. Harrigan learned his trade in the mining towns of Montana, worked for the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and the Spokane Spokesman Review, but was enchanted by Colville. He purchased the paper in 1909 and continued editing it for nearly forty years until the paper was merged with the Statesman-Examiner. People can read and research issues from the Colville Examiner and other newspapers around Washington and U.S. for free at chroniclingamerica.loc.gov.

“These historic newspapers are a rich resource for historians, genealogists and other researchers,” said State Librarian Jan Walsh. “They provide names, dates, images and tell the story of a community or region in such a comprehensive way. They bring local history alive.”

Chronicling America provides free and open access to over 1.7 million full-text searchable pages from 212 titles published between 1880 and 1922 in 15 states and the District of Columbia. More pages from other newspapers around Washington State will be periodically uploaded throughout 2010 as part of the Washington State Library's National Digital Newspaper Program \(NDNP\) grant.

“It’s exciting to have this collection in Chronicling America. It will give researchers the ability to search across multiple collections of newspapers from various states at once,” said Deputy State Librarian Marlys Rudeen.

Part of the mission and purpose of the Washington State Library is to collect, preserve and make accessible to Washingtonians materials on the government, history, culture and natural resources of the state. Read more about the State Library.
