State Library contributes Seattle Star to Chronicling America

Site is home to nearly 2.7 million historic newspaper pages

OLYMPIA... The Seattle Star is among seven newspapers and more than 23,000 historic newspaper pages recently contributed to Chronicling America, making Washington State's contribution to the program a total of 23 titles and over 115,000 pages.

Chronicling America is a project of the National Digital Newspaper Program (NDNP), a partnership between the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Library of Congress.

Newspaper magnate E. W. (Edward Willis) Scripps once wrote that "the best community in which to found a newspaper is one that is comparatively young and whose population has in very recent time increased." With a population of 40,000 and growing, Seattle at the turn of the century fit Scripps' description well. Scripps hired editor E. Hazard Wells to found his latest venture, the Seattle Star, on February 2, 1899. The Seattle Star remained in publication until 1947. People can read and research issues from this and other newspapers around Washington and U.S. for free at chroniclingamerica.loc.gov.

"These historic newspapers are a rich resource for historians, genealogists and other researchers," said Acting State Librarian Rand Simmons. "They provide names, dates, images and tell the story of a community or region in such a comprehensive way. They bring local history alive."

Chronicling America provides free and open access to nearly 2.7 million full-text searchable pages from 348 titles published between 1860 and

1922 in 22 states and the District of Columbia. The Washington State Library's National Digital Newspaper Program \(NDNP\) grant was renewed through June 2012, allowing more pages from other newspapers around Washington State to be uploaded over the next two years.

“It’s exciting to have this collection in Chronicling America,” said Deputy State Librarian Marlys Rudeen. “It will give researchers the ability to search across multiple collections of newspapers from various states at once.”

Part of the mission and purpose of the Washington State Library is to collect, preserve and make accessible to Washingtonians materials on the government, history, culture and natural resources of the state. Read more about the State Library.
